HOLLY'S HAUNT

It was only a matter of time. Renowned interior designer and showroom owner Holly Hunt has thrown her hat into Miami's red-hot realty market with L'Atelier Residences, a luxury oceanfront high-rise that will mark the tastemaker's first residential project partnership. And what a partnership it is! A collaboration with SMG Management, W Capital Group and the Disney Family's Shamrock Holdings, the 18-story all-glass residential tower will house 20 residences in 2,300- and 4,600-square-foot configurations, as well as (wait for it) two multilevel penthouses clocking in at 8,000 square feet each. Architect Luis Revuelta and landscape master Enzo Enea have also been tapped for their respective talents, but it's obvious that it's Hunt's signature aesthetic that brokers are touting as the main selling points. The designer will select luxury brands for the kitchen and bath appliances, and personally furnish the two aforementioned penthouses. In addition to the aesthetic values (and undeniable cachet) that Hunt brings to the table, L'Atelier will also boast a full-service concierge, a state-of-the-art spa, a hammock garden and a 78-foot lap pool. "Our mission is to reimagine the interior spaces to flow in concert with the building's architecture," says Hunt. "It will be a new, rich, modern living environment with spectacular panoramic views and luxurious living spaces." We can almost hear the scribble of signatures on those dotted lines. $4.3 million-$25 million, sales center: 119 Washington Ave., Ste. 102, Miami Beach, 305.985.6400, lateliermiamibeach.com -MM

FAB COLLAB!

Good Taste

Why only wear fashion when you can taste it too? For the first time ever in its 153-year history, French pâtisserie Ladurée has collaborated with a designer brand to create a fabric box for its heavenly confections. None other than Emilio Pucci, a shoo-in considering its iconic prints whose hues are as vibrant as Ladurée's macarons, came up with four options for its Capri motif, including paper or silk boxes in coral pink or turquoise. Just as enticing is what's inside: eight macarons in a custom-blended lemon-and-rose flavor. The goodies hit shelves in late May. 1118 Lincoln Road, Miami Beach, 786.275.6621, laduree.com -Rebecca Kleinman

INSIDE OUT
Ladurée X Emilio Pucci's macarons ($28-$39) are bound to be this summer's chicest treat.

Fragile Beauty

Could the enfant terrible of the contemporary art world be calming down? Bad boy artist Damien Hirst (he of the formaldehyde tiger shark and diamond-encrusted skulls) and revered crystal brand Lalique recently revealed a collaboration devoid of any unpleasantness. Introduced to much acclaim at the last Maison&Objet Paris and now in select stores, Eternal is a collection of 36 glass panels in 12 colors featuring an engraved butterfly—a motif well-known to admirers of Hirst's work that was also close to the heart of René Lalique. Presented in three forms (Beauty, Love and Hope), each panel is numbered to a quantity of just 50 worldwide, so collectors should take note. "I've always loved crystal [because] it's both beautiful and difficult to work with," says Hirst. "It was amazing to use the expert craftsmanship of Lalique for something new, and the results are beyond all my expectations." Sounds like the creative rebel is spreading his wings in a whole new way. $19,000-$30,000, Lalique, Bal Harbour Shops, 9700 Collins Ave., Bal Harbour, 305.537.5150, lalique.com -Luis R. Rigual
