HOLLY HUNT ART

"To see the stars the pearly arc with matching charm and grace every thread slim and green the pools reflecting each leaf met by the waters deep that eyes could piece what stencils of golden light when my heart is weary the grand old oak sleeps. Every thread a twin matching the white clouds the heavens maze led astray in pleased glee by the ghostly gleams in the amber depths of." As described by Mira: The writing on [this] triptych is about our state of the environment. I select words and references to nature to make the spectator aware of the beauty of our planet and the need to protect it. I gather the words from a book called Flordays (Don Blanding, published September 1, 1999) a description of natural forces. I follow a random selection, combining the words and images. —like automatic poetry.
